CAIRO DAILY MARKET.

Cairo, Ill., April 2, 1869.

The week opens with but a moderate amount of business doing in a general way, though there seem to have been a good demand for Flour, sales of which seem to rather increase, if anything, during the corresponding season and are likely to do so. The corn market is well established for that Cairo can supply the trade south of her with this great staple to better advantage than any other market. Our dealers all buy from, or are direct agents of the numerous Mills in the interior of the State, and will sell as low as 10¢ less than the nearest grades can be bought in the other large market, while our proximity to our own facilities, and proximity to southern points gives us unrivaled advantages over all more distant markets. Sales for the past three days, aggregate as follows:
